"We're Going to Party

Dedicated to the year the seniors were born...

1999

The year of 1999 to 2000 involved many sporting events. The Yankees won the World Series in both 1999 and 2000. The US Women's World Cup team had a victory over China in a 5-4 win in penalty kicks with 90,185 people in attendance...the largest number of fans to ever attend a women's sporting event. Lance Armstrong fought a three-year battle with cancer and then won the Tour de France.

This year marked the beginning of the era of early 2000s music. Britney Spears was highly popular, as her "Baby One More Time" album was just released and became an instant hit. NSYNC was also growing in popularity, as their "No Strings Attached" album was released in March of 2000.

Many TV shows and movies back then became classics. Popular TV shows included Gilmore Girls, Survivor, CSI, Spongebob, Family Guy, and Dora the Explorer. Popular movies included Cast Away, Bring It On, Toy Story 2, and Final Destination.

Like It's 1999!" -Prince

A glimpse into the year of the millennial babies...

2000

The transition into the new millennium brought the craze of the Y2K shutdown. People believed that computers would completely shut down, causing chaos and panic. Technology was definitely on people's minds back then, though, as Apple began designing its first iPod.

This year also introduced many trends that have stayed relevant ever since. While many people were devastated by the announcement of the end of Beanie Babies, they still remain a popular collector's item today. The Harry Potter books were also a hit back then and have continued to be popular.

Bill Clinton was the president of the U.S. during this time; although his impeachment trials began on January 7, 1999, he remained in office. Three months later, the Columbine Shootings occurred and became a catalyst for the debate over hand-gun control.

The Road Less Traveled...

Ever since he was young, Sam Evans has wanted to be an actor. At age 10, he began taking performing arts classes. He fell in love with being able to tell stories and learned more about different perspectives through art. Pretty soon, he was training in singing, dancing, and acting five days a week after school and rehearsing for shows in the evening and on weekends. He has been performing with the Electric Youth for four years and has traveled to 28 cities across Europe. He has performed 48 shows abroad with the group, including 4th of July shows for U.S. troops as well as a concert for diplomats and their families at the American Embassy in Rome. He and the group have also entertained at Normandy D-Day sites, Disneyland Paris, and historic theaters. He hopes to study theater, music, and film in college and pursue a career in performing arts.

For six years, William Johnson has been playing power soccer. When the sport was first introduced to him at camp, he was beyond excited. Growing up in a family of athletes and sports lovers, he was tired of sitting on the sidelines; with power soccer, he no longer had to. Since then, he and his team have won the national championship for Division 3 and came in 3rd place for Division 2. He has also been elected to the All-Star Power Soccer Team. His ultimate goal is to play on Team USA, the national team.

When Julie Letai first got on the ice, she started out as a figure skater. However, hating the tu-tus and eager to do speed tricks, she switched over to speed skating at the age of 7. Since then, she has made lifelong friends and has given back to her community by helping out at countless events, such as the Speed Skating Special Olympics. Not only that, she has achieved amazing accomplishments. As a senior in high school, she has been chosen for the National Junior Development Team, has been named one of the top 20 women in speed skating, and has qualified for the Olympic Trials. Her goal is to make the Junior World Team in 2018.

In the Summer of 2017, Jack Tomlin created a band after his guitar teacher advised that playing with a group is the best way to learn how to play. He chose the other members, Anton Kobrin, John Kohler, Jack Lane, and Justin Plakias, because of their collective love of music and the fun they have had when playing together. Although they are a new band, they have already achived great accomplishments such as playing for Jack Lane's dog and at the Medfield High School Pep Rally! The band they have formed is a fun way for them to just play music, without taking it too seriously. They hope to get a gig around town in the spring at places like Blue Moon. They also hope to play at other school functions like the All Night Grad Party in 2018.

Eight years ago, Cassie Navalta was introduced to fencing at the Pfaff Center and became obsessed, joining a fencing club not long after. Over the years, fencing has taught her how to perfect her time-management skills, as the training schedule can be intense. She has also made lifelong friends from across the country, while, according to her, being able to eat whatever she wants because of the constant training. Even though, as she jokes, fencing has led to her right hand, thigh, and bicep awkwardly being an inch bigger than her left side, she wouldn't have it any other way! She has accomplished so much, as she was ranked 26th in the country for her age group on the Division 1 national points list, was regional points winner last year, is currently rated the highest possible (A17), and has placed top 32 at two Junior Olympics. She hopes to fence Division 1 NCAAs in college.

Kay Scott is a talented makeup artist and has been trying to perfect the craft for more than four years now. She was inspired by the popular TV show "FaceOff" and started watching YouTube tutorials to learn new techniques. As she progressed, makeup became a fun hobby and a unique form of expression. She does makeup for Medfield Drama, and she loves to watch the different characters that she helps create come to life. Kayla hopes to one day work behind the scenes on movies or big theatrical productions.

Ever since April of freshman year, Kate Travis has been involved in activism. One of her most notable actions so far happened after seeing a "Daily Show" clip about how many states, including Massachusetts, allow rapists to share custody with their victims' children. Enraged by the injustice, she, Rachel Cohen, and Jack Nedell went to her teacher Mr. Barrows and discussed ways to make a change. The steps she took to fight this law led to her speaking with local representatives, meeting with the head of the Senate Judiciary Committee, being interviewed by newspapers, and submitting written testimony in favor of a new bill. Although it didn't get passed, everything in that experience later led her to an internship on the Setti Warren Campaign. She loves activism because she can actually help people and work towards something bigger than herself. One day, she hopes to be an activist for a living and work on the staff of elected representatives or on campaigns.

Despite losing five strong seniors, the 2017-2018 season was great. With only seven returning girls, there was not much hope for a winning season. However, through hard work and determination, as well as gaining some solid new members, this team wound up placing 3rd at Sectionals and 5th at States.

"We had freshmen and sophomores coming and they have flourished." -Coach Libin

"Poulopoulos is contributing some of her best gymnastics in the postseason, which is impressive because this is her first season in high school gymnastics." -Kat Cornetta, Medfield Wicked Local
